

2015 Primal Wear Race Production Partner Award

The Race Production Partner Award acknowledges an individual whose outstanding partnership role in race productions is key to the success of a league's race event production.

Hal Miller, Larson-Miller Medical Waste Disposal Service, Idaho Interscholastic Cycling League

Hal and his dad Mark played a pivotal role in the success of Idaho's inaugural racing season. Hal has been a longtime advocate for increased bicycle opportunities in the state of Idaho. He has built trails, produced mountain bike races, operated cycling clubs and supported youth cycling for well over a decade. When Hal learned of the creation of a NICA league in his home state, he jumped at the opportunity to help establish the Idaho League. With his race production background as well as a teenage son currently racing bikes at the national level, Hal quickly became one of the most valuable contributors to Idaho's early success. Hal's company, Larson-Miller Medical Waste Disposal, donated the Idaho League's Race Production Trailer as well as connected most of the Core Racing Staff with one another — which allowed the League's races to go off flawlessly during its inaugural 2015 season.

Hal rocked the microphone for all of the season's races — calling the racing action, thanking our wonderful sponsors, and conducting fun and exciting post-race interviews with our student-athletes. Most recently, Larson-Miller threw down a huge challenge during the CLIF Family Foundation's "Share the Ride" fundraising campaign. Hal challenged the Idaho League community to raise $14,000 — promising that Larson-Miller would close the gap to the League's total fundraising goal of $20,000. Well, Idaho stepped up big time — and when the fundraising dust settled, the Idaho League raised over $25,000 to be used toward building a bigger, better and more inclusive-than-ever Idaho League for 2016 and beyond.
